New York, NY, November 7, 2014 — To coincide with the exhibition Cy Twombly: Treatise on the Veil, the Morgan Library & Museum presents a concert by the dynamic JACK Quartet on Thursday, November 20, 7 PM and 9 PM, showcasing a selection of compositions from Matthias Pintscher’s Studies for Treatise on the Veil (2004–2009). Pintscher’s scores were written in response to Twombly’s painting, and the JACK’s performance at the Morgan offers a special, one-time-only opportunity to bring the painting and the music together in the exhibition gallery. New arrangements of Monteverdi’s L’Orfeo for string quartet will also be performed by the JACK.

About the Exhibition

Cy Twombly’s Treatise on the Veil (Second Version) is considered a pivotal work in the career of one of the most important artists to emerge in the wake of Abstract Expressionism. Yet, due to its size—close to thirty-three feet in length—this highlight of his celebrated “grey-ground” period is rarely shown and has not been exhibited in New York in nearly thirty years. Since September 26, Treatise on the Veil and a selection of related drawings have been on view at the Morgan, in a collaboration with Houston’s Menil Collection, which owns the works and organized the exhibition. The show will run through January 25, 2015.

Executed in Rome in 1970, Treatise on the Veil (Second Version) was inspired by a musical composition and explores Twombly’s fascination with time, space, and movement. White lines running across the work’s grey surface suggest, in the artist’s words, “a time line without time.” The twelve drawings in the exhibition—which combine pencil, crayon, collage, tape, measurements, and other inscriptions—offer an intriguing window into the artist’s creative process. Treatise on the Veil (Second Version) was last exhibited in New York in 1985 at DIA.

According to Twombly, both versions of Treatise on the Veil were inspired by a musical piece by French composer Pierre Henry (b.1927), a pioneer of musique concrète, a type of music that incorporates non-instrumental sounds recorded on magnetic tape and manipulated. Henry’s 1953 piece, entitled The Veil of Orpheus, features the recording of cloth being torn—a prolonged, seemingly unending sound that impressed Twombly for its embodiment of the concept of duration.

Henry’s composition evoked the journey of Orpheus to the underworld to rescue his wife, Eurydice. The composer used the recording of tearing fabric to reference the moment at which Orpheus loses his bride forever by transgressing the gods’ command and gazing upon her before leaving Hades. The reference to mythological poet and musician Orpheus would have appealed to Twombly’s love of classical culture.

About the JACK Quartet

The JACK Quartet electrifies audiences worldwide with “explosive virtuosity” (Boston Globe) and “viscerally exciting performances” (New York Times). The recipient of Lincoln Center’s Martin E. Segal Award, New Music USA’s Trailblazer Award, and the CMA/ASCAP Award for Adventurous Programming, JACK has performed to critical acclaim around the globe at venues such as Carnegie Hall (USA), Lincoln Center (USA), Wigmore Hall (United Kingdom), Suntory Hall (Japan), La Biennale di Venezia (Italy), and Kölnner Philharmonie (Germany). Comprising violinists Christopher Otto and Ari Streisfeld, violist John Pickford Richards, and cellist Kevin McFarland, JACK is focused on the commissioning and performance of new works.

JACK operates as a nonprofit organization dedicated to the performance, commissioning, and spread of new string quartet music. The quartet has led workshops with young performers and composers at Princeton University, Yale University, Harvard University, New York University, Columbia University, the Eastman School of Music, Oberlin Conservatory, Manhattan School of Music, June in Buffalo, New Music on the Point, and at the Darmstadt Internationale Ferienkurse für Neue Musik. The members of the quartet met while attending the Eastman School of Music and studied closely with the Arditti Quartet, Kronos Quartet, Muir String Quartet, and members of the Ensemble Intercontemporain.

A Statement by Composer Matthias Pintscher

In the early 1970s American painter Cy Twombly created a series of art works called "Treatise on the Veil" – it included numerous sketches and two major paintings. My own Treatise cycle refers to this series of work, while also acting as an hommage to an artist I very much admire; an artist whose work heavily influenced the structural make-up of my very own compositions, especially in recent years.

"Veil" is a term that, when used with an audio or visual reference has multiple meanings – and these are particularly welcome when listening to this piece of music. Cy Twombly also refers to "veil" as a derivation of the italian "velo", which is a drawing instrument developed by Leonardo da Vinci to help detect and analyse perspective. And thus my musical discourse is indicative of my attempts to draw this perspective line. By the use of several, multilayered composition and... playing techniques, I try to create exactly this allusion of crossing lines with each other. Similar to the line sketched on a surface, long-drawn notes ("lines") appear to develop an added dimension of space, in alignment to the audio perspective.

Amongst other things, the processes of veiling/unveiling are achieved by the preparation of the instruments, thus prising open the actual audible result of articulation and having it appear in a "different quality". I often find myself wishing that I was able to draw directly onto the sound of the instruments like a painter…

The Morgan Library & Museum
The Morgan Library & Museum began as the private library of financier Pierpont Morgan, one of the preeminent collectors and cultural benefactors in the United States. Today, more than a century after its founding in 1906, the Morgan serves as a museum, independent research library, musical venue, architectural landmark, and historic site. In October 2010, the Morgan completed the first-ever restoration of its original McKim building, Pierpont Morgan’s private library, and the core of the institution. In tandem with the 2006 expansion project by architect Renzo Piano, the Morgan now provides visitors unprecedented access to its world-renowned collections of drawings, literary and historical manuscripts, musical scores, medieval and Renaissance manuscripts, printed books, and ancient Near Eastern seals and tablets.
